

Step by step to new peaks of popularity

From the earliest days of the automobile, "Standard" Gasoline has been the leading motor fuel. Today "Standard" outsells any other gasoline by more than two gallons to one.

Experience and research have built the following qualities into "Standard" Gasoline—

- Easy Starting—in coldest weather.
- Quick Acceleration—necessary in traffic.
- Power, Steady and Reliable—for hills and long, hard runs.
- Mileage Efficiency—proved over and over by road tests in every type of car.
- Safety to Motor—a fuel that cannot possibly injure your engine.
- Complete Combustion—it burns cleanly, leaving practically no carbon, and burns completely, leaving no "loose ends" to dilute the motor oil.
- Uniformity—you can set your carburetor on "Standard" and forget it, for each gallon is like every other gallon wherever you may buy it.
- Availability—"Standard" Gasoline has the further advantage of being easily obtained, as "Standard" pumps are conveniently located throughout the length and breadth of this state.

"Standard" Gasoline solves the fuel problem for the motorist. In "Standard" he gets the best gasoline money can buy. Each year "Standard" reaches new peaks in sales and rises to new heights of public favor.

If you are not a "Standard" user, try this product and see for yourself how satisfactory it really is.

There is no truly "anti-knock" motor fuel being sold, except at a premium price. The best known "anti-knock" fuel is ESSO, the Giant Power Fuel. It is acknowledged by engineers to be in a class by itself—a genuine "anti-knock" fuel, specially made for use in high compression motors, and in motors that are carbonized from long usage. ESSO costs more to make, and has to be sold at a small premium over "Standard" Gasoline, but ESSO gives an extra engine performance never before experienced. On sale only at the Silver ESSO Pumps with the ESSO Globes.

CAPTAIN JACK APPERSON

Judge McClintic sends us the following from the Shinnston News:

The story I am about to relate of an old resident of near Shinnston, I am sure will be interesting if not startling news to many readers of our old home paper. It concerns the latter part of the life-history of a man known back in the fifties of the last century as "Jack" Everson, and by later generations named in Hall's "Daughter of the Elm," as "Harry Esmond."

A year or so prior to the outbreak of the Civil War the subject of this sketch dropped out of public notice as if swallowed up by earth or sea—by advice, (it was said) of his attorney, Col. Ben Wilson, rather than face some accusations that had been entered against him in court. The first thing we heard of him after that was that he had enlisted in the Confederate army and still later had been taken prisoner, but was soon exchanged for a Union soldier. After that more than half a century had passed into oblivion and he with it, so far as the public knew, but this was not so.

In the summer of 1926 while, on a visit in my native West Virginia, a relative told me that "Jack" Everson and family had been living in Pocahontas county, W. Va., for many years, and gave me a few details of his life there.

Just a few evenings since a neighbor of ours, a former resident of Pocahontas county, W. Va., on some inquiries from me confirmed the truth of Jackson Everson's many years residence as his neighbor in Pocahontas county. He was very much surprised and pleased to know that in early life that Jackson Everson and I were such near neighbors that our father's farms joined each other. Our exchange of knowledge of his earlier and later life was very interesting to us both, and constituted the major part of our evening's visit.

Upon the whole there were more of sunshine than shadows in Jackson Everson's later than in his earlier life, largely due to it is thought to the fact that he married a worthy woman the daughter of a rich and worthy farmer. Their children consisted of one son and two daughters, the young one of whom was, at one time, the "sweetheart" of Frank Thompson, formerly a resident and deputy sheriff of Pocahontas county, W. Va., and for three years our neighbor and townsman, who was elected in November to our state legislature. If any of the relatives of the late Jackson Everson wish to know more about him, or any curious citizens, such knowledge as we may possess will be freely imparted either by Frank Thompson or the writer, by private letter.

L. F. FORTNEY,

Plainfield, Vermont.
Captain Jack was a friend of our boyhood. He married Miss Mathias Kee, and lived on the Kee land at Marlinton until he died. He was a saucy, debonaire, interesting man who could do everything. The most versatile genius of his times. When the tincture was invented he immediately set up a studio. He was a gallant Confederate soldier.

We are glad to hear that Frank Thompson has taken so well with the Vermont people.

Captain Jack Apperson is remembered with kindness by all who know him.
The last we heard from Granville Davison Hall he was still in the land of the living. He got some material not very faithfully reproduced for the "Daughter of the Elm" from Dr. J. W. Price, who was Captain Apperson's physician for many years.
Captain Jack invented one of the most diabolical practical jokes. All biologists know of the unpleasant habit cures have in regard to the use of poisons and other fixed objects. About the time that white trousers were in style, the old Captain who walked with a staff would rub it against such a post. Seeing a stylish young man he would affect wonder at the white flannel trousers and discuss the cloth all the time turning the fabric over on his way into polite society and the first dog that came along would pollute him.

JOSEPH B. WALTON

Joseph B. Walton was born near Hillsboro, Pocahontas county, January 23, 1854, and died at his home in Renick, Greenbrier county, October 11, 1928, aged 75 years, 8 months and 18 days. He was twice married, his first wife being Miss Martha Brown, who lived only a short time after her marriage. In 1878, Mr. Walton was united in marriage to Miss Hannah Virginia Vaughan; and to this union twelve children were born, seven of whom preceded their parents to the grave. His wife died suddenly on July 22, 1924. The surviving children are Clarence, Lon, Blanche (wife of Harry Simmons), Lucy and Basil, all of Renick. He also leaves one sister, Mrs. Thomas Vaughan, of Keister. Several years ago he professed faith in Christ, and joined the M. E. Church, South, of which he was a member at the time of his death.—West Virginia News.

Charleston.—Pocahontas county's fire loss in January was $5,075, a reduction of $1,425, or 21 per cent, from the same month in 1928. One fire, that of a frame dwelling, was reported to the State Fire Marshal department. The loss was entire and there was $3,000 insurance on the property. The fire was of unknown origin. For the seven months of the year ending January 31, the loss to Pocahontas county from two fires was $5,200, a drop of $450, or 100, of 98 percent, from the corresponding fiscal period the year before.

CONSERVATION

Exponent Editorial Rooms
Clarksburg, W. Va.
January 25, 1929

Dear Uncle Andy:

I'll bet you've got a million letters from cranks in your time and one more or less is not liable to upset you. But I just have to pen you this note which you can take as a confession on my part or a compliment for yourself as you like.

The confession is this: I've been mixed up with this bunch of hunters and fishermen down here for a long time and there was a period some five or more years ago when I had a tremendous respect for what you know about game and fish and another tremendous dislike for what I thought you thought of our honest efforts to modernize conservation in West Virginia. I always figured it a generous disdain for a new fangled idea.

But as I get older at 37, with my teeth all pulled more than a year ago I am changing my violent likes and dislikes for an honest effort to get the other fellow's viewpoint. The best thing a radical can do who has been in a fight up to his ears is to back off about a mile and spend a year or two looking at it from that distance.

But I'm getting off the subject. What I want to congratulate you on is the changing of the Pocahontas Times to the outstanding conservation publication of the state. I am now recommending it to my hunting and fishing cronies and you may expect a few scattered new subscriptions from the Wild Life League down here. With a hundred new papers and journals in reach, the only two that I always read are the Saturday Evening Post and the Pocahontas Times. Even back in the days when I thought you ought to be pardoned for what I thought you thought of our conservation efforts I thought of your show.

A year or two ago I remember you told the citizens of Pocahontas what the deer season would mean to them in an economic way. It was after the deer season of 1927 and a right sensible article. Says I, "The old man is weakening."

The final thing came this week when the Times came out for a trout rearing program for Pocahontas and an increased license all in the same column. I says, "Boy you owe the Old Man an apology." Both of those things have been babies of mine for years and when the mountain boys line up with us trip down here in the lowlands something's going to break.

I am not in favor of polluting the columns of the Times with any ideas of mine but there is one great thought that I have been trying for years to get over through the Exponent and that is that all the coal Marlon had and all the oil Harrison had is only a drop in the bucket to what Pocahontas can have when her citizens fully appreciate the value of her forests, streams, game and fish. I am speaking of good, the gold that now goes to Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Canada; the gold of tourists, hunters and fishermen, and every cent of it cash on the spot, go and get it and forget about small fry factories. Conservatively speaking, from what I have seen of your forests and streams

Pocahontas ought to be taking in at least five million every year from the sources mentioned above. Michigan's cash receipts from the tourist trade last year was something over a hundred million.

Perhaps I've furnished you enough discordant notes for the time being. But I warn you when you come out for recognizing or having our law recognize the black bear for what he is, our biggest remaining game animal, I'm liable to bother you again. Yours respectfully,

Wade Pepper

A Civil War Letter

Camp 31st Va. Reg't
Sun, May 8th, 1864

Dear Fannie and Ma:

I will merely drop you a few lines informing you that Henry & myself are both well & have escaped from danger so far through the fight. The fight commenced on the 4th & has been desperate. Our regiment has been engaged for three days. The loss from our Co. so far is seven wounded & 6 killed.

John Long was killed on the 5th. Most of the wounded are doing well & generally not seriously wounded, except James Shales; who is mortally wounded. He is alive yet, but not expected to live. The rest of our neighbors are safe. Varner Woodruff & all Mc Wilfong's boys, including Daniel also are safe yet. Our regiment fought nobly and has been highly complimented by the officers. We are still in line of battle & will likely have more fighting today. The Yanks have been badly whipped so far at all points. We have orders to move & must close, but will write again the first opportunity. This leaves us both well.

Yours,

Will A. Yeager

Monday morning—We have been marching since 10 o'clock yesterday.

We are now in line of battle near Spottsylvania C. H. The Yanks have been trying to flank us on the right. They seem to be aiming for Richmond. We are well. James Shales died yesterday. I will write again soon.

Good bye.

Tuesday the 10th.—We are still fighting. We are now ten miles from Fredericksburg. John Long & James Shales are killed. Matthias Moore, Charles Moore, Geo. Arbaugh, James Wanless, Robert Lindsay & James Hamilton are wounded, most of them lightly wounded. The rest of us are well. I will write soon again.

W. H. Y.

The above was written to my mother, Mrs. John Yeager and sister Frances Elizabeth Yeager.

Eveline Yeager Beard

[Note: Will A. Yeager who wrote the above letter was killed in the fighting around Petersburg. Matthias Moore was the uncle and Charles Moore the father of Frank Moore of Marlinton.—Editor.]

Game Conservation

West Virginia has a statewide residents combined hunting and fishing license fee of one dollar, pitifully inadequate from any angle you look at it, and lower than that of any state in the union with less than one-half dozen exceptions.

Our Game and Fish Commission done wonderful work; they are to be complimented most highly, but they are in the same position as a carpenter trying to build a house with a tack hammer, they are willing and capable and they will make some progress but they lack the proper tools. The one dollar license fee will not hire sufficient game protectors to adequately enforce the laws. It will not purchase sufficient game birds and animals to annually restock our covers in the proper proportion, and it leaves no funds whatever for the most important feature of vermin control by bounty. The Commission must have more money.

It also seems foolish that year after year when the legislature meets bills must be introduced to specifically regulate the open and closed seasons of fish and game when several of the best legislative minds in the country have definitely stated that this is not properly a function of a legislative body, but rather of the group or commission appointed to oversee fish and game matters. It appears to be the earliest desire of the Wild Life League of West Virginia to help bring about that the Game and Fish Commission of West Virginia shall have full discretionary powers in the matter of regulating open and closed seasons of fish and game. And in this we would only be following the lead of those states which have been most progressive and successful in matters of conservation. From an article in the West Virginia Review by E. D. Knight, of Charleston.

Mrs. Lanty M. McShof Hillsboro, W. Va., is a guest at Old Blue Tavern, Marlinton, on her way to Marlinton to attend the funeral of her husband.
